VALCO Rescue Plan Suffers Setback!

...As Malaysian Firm Withdraws From Deal

Plans to secure private sector involvement in the rehabilitation of the Volta Aluminium Company (VALCO) has hit the rock with the decision of a Malaysian Company to pull out.

Information available to Africa TODAY NEWS indicates that Press Metal Aluminium Holdings Berhad of Malaysia has withdrawn from the consortium pursuing the proposed investment in the Volta Aluminium Company Limited.

Despite this development, concerns have emerged that Arch Holdings Limited continues to present Press Metal as supporting the proposed transaction involving VALCO's assets and operations.

Press Metal was part of a consortium comprising Arch Holdings Limited and Vitrol SA that submitted a Letter of Intent dated September 29, 2025, to VALCO and the Ghana Integrated Aluminium Development Corporation (GIADEC), concerning an integrated aluminium project in Ghana.

The proposed project involved the development of an alumina refinery and associated power infrastructure, together with the renewal and upgrading of the VALCO smelter.

In April 2026, representatives of Press Metal and Vitrol travelled to Ghana and conducted site visits, including a tour of VALCO's manufacturing facility.

Following the visit and a subsequent assessment by its senior management, Press Metal decided not to pursue the project further. The company subsequently wrote to its consortium partners to communicate its withdrawal of interest.

This clarification is significant because Press Metal had submitted only a Letter of Intent and had not made a binding financial commitment to the proposed transaction.

The development raises questions about the present composition, technical capacity and financial strength of the consortium being considered for the proposed VALCO investment.

Workers Protest Proposed Transfer

A few weeks ago, hundreds of visibly concerned VALCO workers, represented by the Industrial and Commercial Workers' Union, ICU Ghana, demonstrated against the proposed transfer of a controlling interest in VALCO to Arch Holdings Limited.

Although the workers protested against the government's decision to pursue a private investor arrangement, sources allege that Arch Holdings influenced the Minister for Lands and Natural Resources, Honourable Emmanuel Armah Kofi Buah, to inaugurate a negotiating team to evaluate and negotiate the proposed transaction.

It has also emerged that a Memorandum of Understanding signed by representatives of the Ministry of Lands and Natural Resources, GIADEC, VALCO and Arch Holdings Limited reportedly provides for possible staff redundancies if the private investor takes control of VALCO.

This appears to contradict assurances that the proposed investment would generate additional employment opportunities for Ghanaians.

Sources close to the New Patriotic Party have also indicated that the party does not support the current government's plan to allow Arch Holdings Limited to acquire a controlling interest in VALCO.

According to the sources, the NPP intends to cancel what it describes as an unfavourable partnership agreement with Arch Holdings Limited if it wins the 2028 general election and returns to power.

ICU Ghana Opposes Proposed VALCO Private Investment and Demands Review of 70 Percent Equity Transfer

The Industrial and Commercial Workers' Union, ICU Ghana, has demanded an immediate suspension of negotiations over the proposed transfer of a controlling stake in VALCO to a private investor.

The Union says it is not opposed to the modernisation, retooling and expansion of VALCO. It, however, rejects any arrangement that would result in the State losing control of the strategic national asset.

The demand follows the inauguration of a negotiating team by the Ministry of Lands and Natural Resources on August 21, 2026, to negotiate definitive terms with a prospective strategic investor for the retooling and expansion of VALCO.

In a statement signed by its General Secretary, Morgan Ayawine, on Thursday, August 27, the ICU said the government's description of the proposed transaction as not constituting "outright privatisation" requires further clarification.

The Union said this description appears inconsistent with information previously presented to it regarding a proposed transfer of 70 percent of VALCO's equity to a private investor.

"In our considered view, ceding a controlling interest in a wholly State owned company to a private investor would, in substance, result in a significant transfer of ownership and control," the ICU stated.

Questions Over Investor Selection

The Union also raised concerns about the process through which the prospective investor was selected.

According to the ICU, the Lands and Natural Resources Minister, Emmanuel Armah Kofi Buah, had indicated to workers that no investor had been selected.

The Union, however, said GIADEC inaugurated an investor selection committee in November 2025 and subsequently announced on January 8, 2026, that investors had been secured.

The ICU noted that Press Metal, which was publicly presented as the principal technical and smelting partner of the Arch Holdings consortium, had submitted only a Letter of Intent before GIADEC's January announcement.

Representatives of Press Metal and Vitrol reportedly did not physically visit VALCO to assess its facilities until April 2026, several months after the consortium was reportedly selected.

The ICU said these circumstances raise serious questions about the basis on which the consortium was assessed and considered suitable for the transaction.

"A Letter of Intent, by itself, does not necessarily constitute a completed technical assessment, a binding financial commitment or evidence of operational capacity," the Union stated.

The ICU is therefore demanding that the government explain the criteria, technical assessments and due diligence procedures used in selecting the consortium.

Press Metal's withdrawal also requires the government to clarify the current composition of the prospective strategic investor and demonstrate that the remaining consortium possesses the technical and financial capacity to undertake the investment.

"The Ministry must therefore disclose, in the interest of transparency, who currently constitutes the prospective strategic investor and on what basis the Government intends to proceed with negotiations," the Union said.

The ICU added that its preliminary inquiries into the Arch Holdings consortium had identified matters requiring further clarification and independent verification.

Alternatives to Private Control

The Union acknowledged that VALCO's operational challenges require urgent attention but maintained that transferring controlling ownership to a private investor is not the only option available to the government.

It proposed reliable and competitively priced electricity, State backed recapitalisation, appropriate debt financing, operational and governance reforms, and clearly measurable performance targets as possible alternatives.

According to the ICU, these measures could support the modernisation of the plant.

sation and restoration of VALCO without surrendering State ownership and control.

The Union stressed that its opposition to the proposed transfer predates the inauguration of the negotiating team.

Its National Executive Council formally resolved against the proposed transfer of 70 percent of VALCO's equity on July 31, 2026.

Earlier, on July 27, the ICU organised a demonstration in Tema and presented a petition to President John Dramani Mahama, asking him to ensure that VALCO remained under full State ownership.

The Union is demanding that the government address the concerns raised in the petition before negotiations continue.

It has called on President Mahama to direct the Minister for Lands and Natural Resources to suspend all processes leading to the proposed transfer, pending a comprehensive review and a formal response to the ICU's petition.

"VALCO is a strategic national asset," the Union stated, stressing that its future must be determined by what best serves Ghana's national interest, its workers, its industrial development and future generations.

In a letter dated July 30, 2026, Press Metal Aluminium Holdings Berhad said it is pulling out of the VALCO's asset takeover project.

The letter addressed to the local chairman of the Industrial and Commercial Workers Union (ICU) of the TUC gave the reason for its decision as "a hostile reception which included chants and billboards" when its delegation visited the plant.

The full text of the letter is published below;

Subject: Clarification to your letter dated 22

July, 2026

Dear Sir,

Thank you for reaching out for clarification.

Press Metal was part of a consortium with Arch Holdings Limited and Vitol SA that submitted a Letter of Intent dated 29 September, 2025 to Valco and GIADEC regarding an integrated aluminium project in Ghana.

The project involved the developmet of an alumina refinery and associated power infrastructure, as well as the renewal and upgrade of a smelter.

In April 2026, representatives for Press Metal and Vitol traveled to Ghana to conduct site visits, which included touring VALCO's manufacturing facility. While visiting VALCO's facility, we encountered a hostile reception which included chants and billboards.

Following the trip, our representatives debriefed senior management on their findings and observations.

After careful consideration, we decided not to pursue the project further and notified our consortium partners in the last few weeks.

Thank you for the opportunity to clarify our position.

Yours faithfully,

Choa Wei Keong

Public Demands NCA Investigate Telecel Over Rising Mobile Money Scams

The general public is demanding to know why fraudsters are using Telecel (formerly Vodafone) numbers to scam unsuspecting individuals through mobile money (MoMo) fraud.

Failing to understand this trend, the public is calling on the government, through the National Communications Authority (NCA), to immediately investigate Telecel regarding these fraudulent activities.

Many suspect that certain Telecel employees may be colluding with the fraudsters in these ongoing criminal operations.

They pointed out that whenever fraudsters hack an individual's mobile money account, they typically provide a Telecel number to the victim and instruct them to transfer the demanded funds to it.

For incident, on Wednesday, September 2, 2026, fraudsters hacked the mobile phone account of a prominent chief in the Ga State.

They used his phone number to demand GHC400 from unsuspecting individuals, instructing them to send the money to the Telecel number 0502643181 under the account name Amanda Ali.

The Africa TODAY NEWS newspaper provided the text of the message sent by the fraudsters

Good evening. I hope you are doing well. Could you please assist me by sending 400 GHS to someone right now? I will pay you back tomorrow. Please send it to this Vodafone number: 0502643181, registered under Amanda Ali."

As highlighted by MT-NGhana, "DO NOT SEND MONEY IMMEDIATELY!" Users on social platforms advise that "if you receive an urgent message from a friend asking for money, pause and call to verify before transferring funds.

Footsoldiers Declare War On NDC Stingy CEOs ...Call On President Mahama To Reshuffle Them

As President John Dramani Mahama prepares for a major reshuffle of CEOs of state institutions, a parallel list is gaining traction online. Not from the Office of the President, but from party foot-soldiers on social media.

On Facebook and WhatsApp platforms groups of NDC, grassroots activists are circulating what they call the "Stingy CEOs List" – a compilation of heads of SOEs and public agencies they claim have abandoned the base since their appointment.

Even though their criteria has little to do with audited accounts or KPIs, Analysts say their stance are very much respected by the corridors of power.

According to dozens of posts monitored by the Exposé Newspaper and senaradioonline.com following Dr. Callistus' release, a CEO lands on the list if he or she:

1. Does not pick calls from constituency executives and foot-soldiers
2. Has never supported funerals, weddings or branch activities
3. Sacked perceived party people and replaced them with "outsiders"
4. Is tight-fisted when foot-soldiers visit the office for "transport"

One viral post on Facebook read: "Some CEOs think the job is their personal property. They were struggling like us in opposition but now they don't even give us water when we visit. They must go."

Another on WhatsApp platform listed about 8 institutions by category – without naming individuals – claiming their CEOs "have built walls around themselves" and "will make us lose 2028 if they stay."

The list is already causing tension. While some party communicators like Elikem Kotoko argue it reflects genuine frustration of the base who toiled for victory, others warn it risks turning a technocratic performance review into a popularity contest.

CEOs who have featured prominently in all platforms are Madam Justina Nelson who is CEO of Minerals and Income Fund (MIIF), Director General of NCA, Rev Edmund Fianko.

The rest are CEO of Ghana Free Zones Authority Dr. Mary Awusi and CEO of VRA Edward Obeng Kenzo, Director General of Lotteries, Mohammed Abdul-Salam, among others.

Meanwhile, the Presidency has said the impending changes form part of a broader reorganisation to strengthen management, improve coordination and enhance performance across the public sector. President Mahama has previously emphasized competence, accountability and commitment as the benchmark for his appointees.

But for the foot-soldiers, competence includes taking care of the base.

"Performance is not only grammar and big English on TV. If your people are hungry and you are stingy, you are failing the party," a popular grassroots page, Foot Soldiers, said.

Political analysts say President Mahama will have to balance both. Retaining only loyal but underperforming CEOs will hurt the SOE debt crisis, but ignoring the base completely could demoralize the structures ahead of the 2028 elections.

For now, the "Stingy List" is unofficial, unverified, and constantly being edited in the comment sections. But in Ghanaian politics, what starts on social media as a joke often ends up on the desk of decision-makers.

Stay tuned for the list of "good and retained" CEOs in our next publication.

MP Backs Residents ...Protesting Poor Roads and Drainage Challenges

The Member of Parliament (MP) for the Anyaa Sowutuom Constituency in the Greater Accra Region, Honourable Emmanuel Tobbin, has expressed excitement and fully backed the residents of A-Lang, Santa Maria, Awoshie, and Antieku, who demonstrated on Wednesday, September 2, 2026, to demand accountability from political leaders and government officials over worsening road and drainage challenges in their communities.

Honourable Tobbin noted that although the residents did not officially submit their petition to him, he read their concerns in a petition presented to the Municipal Chief Executive (MCE) of the Ga Central Municipal Assembly on social media.

He expressed excitement about their initiative to voice their grievances to the current government.

The demonstrators didn't petition me directly, but I am officially aware that they will be holding a demonstration," the MP stated. "I did not want to participate in the protest itself, as I did not want it to look like a political demonstration.

However, I truly share their sentiments and support their move to demand action on proper drainage and poor roads within the constituency." According to the MP, the residents' demands are both realistic and long overdue.

He emphasized that the demonstration is a step in the right direction.

The MP lamented that even minor rainfall causes severe flooding in some communities within the constituency, destroying livelihoods and business activities.

He stressed that urgent action must be taken to manage these ongoing flooding disasters and safeguard the constituency.

Honourable Emmanuel Tobbin also stated that tackling the flooding disaster is not something an MP can do alone.

He explained that the problem is massive and requires urgent government intervention.

Finally, the MP pledged his continued commitment to pushing for measures that address the residents' concerns regarding poor road networks, drainage challenges, and other pressing issues affecting the livelihoods of the people in his constituency.

It would recalled that thousands of residents from A-Lang, Santa Maria, Awirshie, and Antieku have staged a massive demonstration to demand accountability from political leaders and government officials over worsening road and drainage challenges in their communities.

Under the theme "Operation Fix Our Roads and Drainage Systems," the protestors marched through the principal streets of their neighborhoods to present a petition to the Municipal Chief Executive (MCE) of the Ga Central Municipal Assembly in Accra, Mr Emmanuel Nii Adotey Allotey.

The demonstrators held the Assembly accountable for the lack of government budgetary allocations, which are desperately needed for social and infrastructural development projects.

According to the protestors, the government has completely neglected their communities.

They lamented that perennial flooding has devastated local livelihoods, causing residents to lose valuable property to annual water disasters.

The residents bemoaned the persistent flooding and called on the Municipal Assembly to take urgent, lasting action to address the drainage challenges in their communities.

The residents reiterated that years of recurring floods have resulted in significant damage to homes, vehicles and other property, while previous interventions have failed to provide a lasting solution to the problem.

According to the residents, recent rains caused floodwaters to enter several homes, destroying household items and damaging vehicles.

One resident who said he had lived in the area for nearly 30 years described the situation as a longstanding problem that successive governments and authorities had failed to resolve.

He said the recent flooding had reached significant levels in some homes, damaging televisions, household belongings and other property residents had acquired over the years.

"Most of us, our rooms were flooded, even above my height level. Your TVs, the properties that you've invested in for years, are almost gone," he said.

He added that several vehicles were also affected, with some residents reporting damage to their car engines.

Residents demand proper storm drains

The protestors are calling for the construction of larger and properly designed storm drains capable of carrying large volumes of rainwater.

They say the existing drainage system is inadequate to cope with the amount of water generated during heavy rainfall, resulting in flooding of homes and roads.

The residents also want the Assembly to develop a permanent solution rather than continue with temporary measures whenever flooding occurs.

Some of the protestors also raised concerns about a development project in the area, alleging that the reclamation and filling of a section of land may have affected the natural flow of water and contributed to the flooding.

Another resident claimed that a section which previously served as a channel for water had been filled and that construction had taken place on the reclaimed area.

He said residents were concerned about the potential impact of the development on drainage in the community.

The resident stressed, however, that he was not an engineer and was relying on concerns reportedly raised by engineers.

He said the matter had been brought to the attention of relevant state institutions, including the Auditor-General and other investigative authorities, for possible examination.

The protestors are demanding that the relevant authorities investigate the drainage situation and establish the causes of the recurring floods.

They also want authorities to determine whether developments in the area have affected existing waterways and drainage channels.

According to one of the residents, technical officials had previously warned that failure to address the drainage situation could result in continued flooding whenever it rains.

The protestors say the issue should be treated as a development concern rather than a political matter.

They stressed that after elections, their expectation is for elected representatives and the Assembly to focus on providing infrastructure and addressing challenges affecting residents.

Call for urgent intervention

Residents from communities including Santa Maria and Sowutuom say they have endured repeated flooding for years and are demanding immediate intervention before further rains cause more destruction.

They are calling for properly engineered and adequately sized drainage infrastructure, improved water channels and a comprehensive solution to prevent floodwaters from entering homes and damaging property.

The residents stated that they are prepared to continue pressing the authorities until a permanent solution is found to what they describe as one of the most persistent challenges facing communities in the municipality.

Mahama Ayariga Deploys Drones ...To Assess Decades-Old Jamestown Waste Heap

The government has begun using drone technology to determine the volume of the waste heap that has accumulated at Jamestown for more than 50 years, as preparations intensify to clear the site.

Minister for Local Government, Chieftaincy and Religious Affairs, Mahama Ayariga, said the scientific assessment will help government determine the equipment, number of trucks and time required to complete the evacuation.

“We at Local Government we are equally ready, we are just waiting for His Excellency the President to return and then we will firm up the program and he will come and lead us in the exercise,” Mr Ayariga stated.

He said Zoomlion has offered technical assistance for the exercise, with technicians already using drones to capture the size and volume of the waste heap.

“This morning the reason why we are here is that we want to commission an evaluation of the volume of the waste that has piled up. So Zoomlion offered to provide some technical assistance,” he said.

“They started working yesterday, they are flying drones to pick their volumes. You know that technology has gotten to a point where you can fly drones and then the drones can capture the area and then be able to calculate and give you the volume of waste that has piled up,” he explained.

Mr Ayariga said the data will allow government to plan the evacuation scientifically and determine how many trucks and trips will be required.

“The reason why we need that information is to also be able to determine how much equipment we need and how many working days or weeks or months we need to be able to accomplish this task. So if you have hundred cubic meters of material and then your trucks can convey, each truck takes five cubic meters, you can just divide hundred by five and then that gives you an indication of how many trucks or trips you have to undertake to be able to dislodge this. So scientifically we can plan with that information,” he stated.

The minister said government will also appeal to contractors to contribute equipment and manpower by taking responsibility for specific volumes of waste rather than providing funds to the state.

“Because their position is that we won’t give you our equipment, we won’t give you our trucks, we won’t give you money, show us what you want to evacuate and we will do it ourselves. They will be more efficient doing it than saying that they should give money to the state to do it and we don’t even want their money, we just want them to come and we show them and say okay this is the heap, you say you will do one thousand, we are watching you do the one thousand for us. He as a contractor will know exactly what to do,” he stated.

Mr Ayariga further said the initiative will be extended to mining companies and major businesses as part of their corporate social responsibility.

“And I’m gonna carry this campaign to the mining companies, I’m gonna carry this campaign to major industrial establishments so that we will offer them the opportunity to participate. So a company like let’s say Newmont Goldfields can say I will evacuate one thousand cubic meters of waste for the country. Now either they bring their equipment from their mine during the weekend when they are not mining and come and then evacuate or they can decide to contract another contractor, say okay let’s enter into an agreement, evacuate X amount,” he said.

He added that other major companies could similarly contribute by taking responsibility for evacuating specified portions of the waste.

“That’s what we have committed to evacuate as our corporate social responsibility. Same way with MTN, MTN can decide that the twenty million that you have rejected will come and then evacuate, will come and evacuate waste with it to compensate for what our country has done. So for us we want the waste evacuated, whoever comes and evacuates, we will give you a heap of waste to evacuate for us,” he added.

Local Governance Seek For Peace And Harmony For A Successful Regime-Oboguman Hema To MCE.

The Paramount Queen Mother of Obogu Traditional Area, Nana Afua Opokua II, is cautioning the Municipal Chief Executive of the Asante Akyem South Municipality of the Ashanti Region, Hon. Maame Sarfoah Appiah to allow peace and Co- Existence in her ruin as a political leader in the area.

The Queen Mother’s caution comes at the back of a renewed rivalry tension between the MCE and the Boys believe to be an opposition Boys at Obogu a community in the Asante Akyem South Municipality.

The renewed tension was triggered when 4 persons claiming to be national security officers with the municipal chief executive Hon. Maame Sarfoah Appiah invaded the obogu township beating the boys who they believe nis in opposition to the MCE which led 3 persons injured on Sunday 23rd August, 2026.

One of the injured persons Oscar Aniakwa speaking to the media said, the initially assorted his senior brother Akwasi Ampofo on allegation of careless Driving and have also slaps the MCE on the road upon confronted.

Mr. Oscar Aniakwa further said, the men’s accusations was unfounded hence they stood in the defense and prevented them from their brother whom they have mercilessly beaten and trying to him up with them to an unknown place, brought the incident.

Granting media interview on the incident, Nana Afia Pokua II said, she has not witnessed such barbaric and uncalled for situation like this in their enclave hence the MCE should put herself together to allow peace and harmony to exist between the Obogu Township so she can pursue ruling as the MCE in the Municipality.

She also called on the government and the party leadership of the NDC to called Hon. Maame Sarfoah Appiah, the Municipal Chief Executive of the Asante Akyem South Municipality to order or else she will make the government unpopular in the Municipality.

Ga Central Residents Petition CHRAJ And EOCO ...Over Unauthorized Land Reclamation and Flooding

Thousands of residents living in Santa Maria, Auntie Aku, and surrounding communities within the Ga Central Municipality have petitioned Commission on Human Rights and Administrative Justice (CHRAJ) and the Economic and Organised Crime Office (EOCO).

The group urging the two key public institutions in Ghana that deal with governance, anti-corruption, and law enforcement, to urgently commission an independent investigation into unauthorized land filling, reclamation, and construction adjacent to the Ga Central Municipal Assembly, and its role in the persistent flooding of Santa Maria and Auntie Aku.

In a petition intercepted by the Africa TODAY NEWS newspaper, residents of Santa Maria, Auntie Aku, and surrounding communities within the Ga Central Municipality raised a matter of grave public concern that goes beyond ordinary infrastructural neglect and now touches directly on institutional accountability.

The two page petition was copied to Municipal Chief Executive, Ga Central Municipal Assembly, Presiding Member, Ga Central Municipal Assembly, Member of Parliament, Anyaa-Sowutuom Constituency, Greater Accra Regional Minister, Ghana Hydrological Authority

National Disaster Management Organisation (NADMO) and all Local Media Houses.

The stated a filling station project is currently under construction immediately beside the Ga Central Municipal Assembly.

It noted that no member of the public has been able to establish with certainty whether the land is government-owned or private property, whether statutory permits were obtained, or under what authority the site was allocated and developed.

Startling Admission

During a site inspection to investigate recurring flooding, an engineer from the Ghana Hydrological Authority admitted that land filling and reclamation works—associated with both the Hydrological Authority and the Municipal Assembly—contributed to the severe flooding that has devastated local homes and businesses for years.

Institutional Contradiction

The petition notes that this is not a minor technical detail, but an admission that the very government institutions mandated to safeguard drainage and enforce building regulations may have authorized or participated in the activities causing the disaster.

Evidence Available

The residents stated that an audio recording of the engineer's statement was captured during the inspection and is available to official offices upon request to aid any investigation.

Below is the full version of the petition

URGENT PETITION FOR INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION INTO UNAUTHORIZED LAND FILLING, RECLAMATION AND CONSTRUCTION ADJACENT TO THE GA CENTRAL MUNICIPAL ASSEMBLY AND ITS ROLE IN THE PERSISTENT FLOODING OF SANTA MARIA AND AUNTIE AKU

To:

The Executive Director, Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), Ghana

The Executive Secretary, Lands Commission, Ghana

The Chief Executive Officer, Land Use and Spatial Planning Authority (LUSPA)

The Regional Director, Commission on Human Rights and Administrative Justice (CHRAJ)

The Executive Director, Economic and Organised Crime Office (EOCO)

The Auditor-General of Ghana

Dear Sir/Madam,

RE: URGENT REQUEST FOR INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION — A FILLING STATION PROJECT AND LAND RECLAMATION BESIDE THE GA CENTRAL MUNICIPAL ASSEMBLY IDENTIFIED AS A CONTRIBUTING CAUSE OF FLOODING AT SANTA MARIA AND AUNTIE AKU

We write on behalf of the residents of Santa Maria, Auntie Aku and surrounding communities within the Ga Central Municipality to raise a matter of grave public concern that goes beyond ordinary infrastructural neglect and now touches directly on institutional accountability.

THE FACTS AS WE KNOW THEM

A filling station project is currently under construction immediately beside the Ga Central Municipal Assembly. To date, no member of the public has been able to establish, with certainty, whether the land in question is government land or private property, whether the appropriate statutory permits were obtained, or under what authority the site was allocated and developed.

More seriously, during a site inspection conducted in our community to investigate the cause of the recurring flooding, an engineer from the Ghana Hydrological Authority made a direct and startling admission: that land filling and reclamation works carried out in the vicinity — works he associated with both the Hydrological Authority and the Municipal Assembly — have contributed to the flooding that has devastated our homes, businesses and lives for years.

This is not a minor technical detail. It is, in effect, an admission from a government engineer that the very institutions responsible for protecting our community from flooding — an agency mandated to safeguard drainage and water bodies, and the Assembly mandated to enforce planning and building regulations — may themselves have authorized or participated in the activity that caused the disaster we have spent years petitioning them to fix.

We wish to state, for the record, that an audio recording of this statement was made during the site inspection and is available to your office upon request, should it assist your investigation.

WHY THIS DEMANDS INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION

If reclamation and land filling near a natural drainage path were approved or carried out without proper environmental and hydrological assessment, this may constitute a direct violation of the Environmental Protection Agency Act, 1994 (Act 490) and its permitting requirements.

If the land is government-owned, residents have a right to know how and to whom it was allocated for private commercial development, and whether due process under the Lands Commission's mandate was followed.

If planning permission was granted for construction on a site now linked by a government engineer to community flooding, this raises serious questions about the Assembly's own Physical Planning Department's due diligence — questions the Assembly cannot credibly investigate on itself.

The fact that the institution allegedly implicated (the Municipal Assembly) is also the body residents have been petitioning for flood relief represents a direct conflict of interest that only an independent oversight body can resolve.

Residents deserve to know whether this is a case of negligence, regulatory failure, or something more deliberate — and only a formal, independent investigation can establish the truth..

OUR REQUEST

We respectfully and urgently request that your institution:

Conduct an independent site inspection and technical assessment of the filling station project and surrounding reclaimed land, and its impact on natural drainage and water flow in the area.

Establish and publicly disclose the ownership status of the land — whether government, stool, or private — and the process by which it was acquired or allocated for this development.

Verify whether the appropriate Environmental Impact Assessment, building permit, and planning permission were obtained prior to construction, and if not, take appropriate enforcement action.

Investigate the specific claim, attributed to a Ghana Hydrological Authority engineer, that land filling and reclamation activity linked to the Authority and the Assembly contributed to the flooding of Santa Maria and Auntie Aku.

Where wrongdoing, negligence or regulatory breach is established, hold the responsible officers and institutions accountable and compel immediate remedial action to restore natural drainage in the area.

Keep our community informed of the progress and outcome of any investigation undertaken, given that it is our lives, homes and safety that remain at risk.

Why a candidate with aggregate 8 can be placed ahead of one with 6 – CSSPS explains

The Coordinator of the Computerized School Selection and Placement System (CSSPS), Sherif Sulemana, has provided an explanation of how candidates are ranked and assigned to their preferred Senior High Schools (SHS), programmes and residential options.

Speaking on the Joy FM Super Morning Show on Thursday, September 3, Mr Sulemana said the placement exercise begins by ranking candidates according to their aggregate scores, after which their selected schools, programmes and residential preferences are matched against available vacancies.

How Candidates Are Ranked

According to Mr Sulemana, the process begins by arranging candidates from the highest-performing aggregate to the lowest.

He explained that candidates are ranked from aggregate six through aggregate 54, with the ranking covering the entire pool of candidates.

With approximately 620,000 candidates, the system first establishes their position based on their aggregate results before proceeding to match them with their choices.

After candidates have been ranked, the CSSPS considers the selections made by each student. These choices include:

Preferred senior high school

Programme of study

Residential status, such as day or boarding

For example, a candidate may select Tamale Senior High School, choose General Science and request boarding.

The placement system then checks whether the candidate's aggregate is competitive enough to secure one of the available slots for that particular school, programme and residential category.

Mr Sulemana explained that the system essentially matches a candidate's academic performance with the specific choices made during the school selection exercise.

How Raw Scores Are Used to Break Ties

While the aggregate score serves as the primary basis for ranking, raw examination scores can become important when two or more candidates have the same aggregate and are competing for limited spaces.

Mr Sulemana illustrated this with two candidates who both obtain aggregate six and select the same school, programme and boarding option.

If only one place remains, the system requires another criterion to determine which candidate gets the slot.

That is where the candidates' raw scores are used as a tie-breaker.

He stressed that raw scores do not replace aggregate scores in the initial ranking. Instead, they are considered when candidates are tied for the same placement opportunity.

Why a Candidate With Aggregate Eight Could Beat One With Aggregate Six

Mr Sulemana also addressed a situation that may appear confusing to parents and candidates — how a student with a higher aggregate number could sometimes secure a place ahead of another student with a lower aggregate.

He explained that this can occur when candidates are competing for the same school, programme and residential category, and the raw scores are required to determine the stronger candidate.

According to him, the grading system can sometimes produce differences between a candidate's raw marks and the grade received.

For instance, one student could score 60 marks in a particular subject and receive a grade one if that performance ranks highest among candidates, while another student could score 90 marks but receive a lower grade because other candidates performed even better.

In such circumstances, the candidate who scored 90 has the higher raw score despite receiving a lower grade.

This is why the CSSPS can use raw marks to provide a more detailed comparison when candidates are competing for the same available slot.

Mr Sulemana noted that it is therefore possible for a candidate with aggregate eight to obtain a place ahead of another with an aggregate of six if both are competing for the same school, program, and residential option and the candidate with an aggregate of eight has the stronger raw scores under the tie-breaking process.

CSSPS Admits More Public Education May Be Needed

The explanation has drawn attention to the importance of understanding how raw scores contribute to the placement exercise.

Mr Sulemana acknowledged that the CSSPS may need to intensify public education on the issue, particularly because many people focus primarily on aggregate scores when assessing placement outcomes.

He said there is a need to explain more clearly how raw scores are used during the placement process.

The CSSPS coordinator also acknowledged broader concerns about the grading system and disclosed that officials had previously discussed whether the system should be reviewed.

He noted that the current approach can sometimes result in candidates with substantially different raw marks receiving grades that do not appear to directly reflect the difference in their actual scores.

CSSPS Says Placement Exercise Is Ready

Mr Sulemana also assured candidates, parents, and guardians that preparations for the 2026/2027 placement exercise were nearing completion.

Responding to questions about whether the process was ready, he said the team was completing the final technical preparations ahead of the scheduled release of the placement results on Friday, September 4, 2026.

He assured the public that there was no need for concern and that the CSSPS was ready to publish the results.

A REQUEST FOR URGENCY AND IMPARTIALITY

We are not making this appeal lightly. Our community has endured years of flooding, has petitioned every relevant local authority in good faith, and has cooperated fully with every official process, including the Ghana Hydrological Authority's own inspection.

It is precisely because that inspection produced information implicating the very institutions we have been petitioning that we now turn to your offices for an independent, impartial and thorough investigation — one that protects the public interest above institutional reputation.

We are prepared to provide any further information, testimony, or access your officers may require, including facilitating community meetings and site visits.

We trust that your institution will treat this matter with the seriousness and urgency it deserves, given the direct link that has been drawn between this land development and the ongoing threat to lives and property in our community.

We look forward to your acknowledgement of this petition and to a prompt commencement of investigations.

Thank you for your attention to this matter of urgent public interest.

Yours faithfully,

"We will observe Sanitation Day this Saturday" — Ayariga urges public to take part

Minister for Local Government, Chieftaincy and Religious Affairs, M a h a m a Ayariga, has announced that this Saturday will be observed as National Sanitation Day, urging the media and stakeholders to intensify public education ahead of the exercise.

Speaking during an engagement, Mr Ayariga said many citizens may simply need timely reminders to participate in the exercise.

"We will observe the sanitation day this Saturday. So we are pleading with all of you continue to educate the public on the importance of the sanitation day and then remind the public. Very often it's not that they don't want to do it but then sometimes they forget," he stated.

He called for public education to begin immediately to ensure that citizens are adequately reminded before Saturday.

"So if we can start from today educating and reminding people that this is sanitation day," he said.

Mr Ayariga further advocated sustained paid advertising to keep the sanitation exercise on the public's mind, particularly ahead of each observance.

"So minister what we also need to do is to have paid advertisements. They are doing it. So paid advertisement reminding people every first week we start reminding people of the sanitation day observance so that they can come out and then observe the sanitation day," he added.

Gov't to mobilise national resources to clear 50-year Jamestown waste heap – Ayariga Minister for Local Government, Chieftaincy and Religious Affairs, M a h a m a Ayariga, has described the long-standing waste heap at Jamestown as a problem that has accumulated over more than five decades, as government prepares to mobilise resources to clear the site.

Speaking during an inspection of the area, Mr Ayariga said the sheer height of the waste heap reflects the scale of the challenge facing the government.

"Of the enormity of the challenge and standing here you can see how high we are above ground level that gives you an indication of what has piled up and this I believe has piled up for more than fifty years," he stated.

He said his Ministry will collaborate with the Ministries of Roads and Highways, Defence and Finance, while also involving the Ministry of Environment, Science and Technology, to mobilise the equipment and resources needed to evacuate the waste.

"The Ministry of Local Government, Chieftaincy and Religious Affairs is going to work with the Ministry of Roads and Highways and then the Ministry of Defence and the Ministry of Finance. We will also invite the Ministry of Environment, Science and Technology and essentially what we are going to do is to mobilize national capacity and I say national capacity because I believe strongly that as a people we have the capacity to surmount this challenge which is to move every waste that is lying here out of this location to a location where it should be," he said.

Mr Ayariga said the government has already identified the Adepa landfill site at Nsawam as the destination for the waste following an inspection of the facility.

He said government will also draw on equipment belonging to contractors operating in the Greater Accra, Eastern and Central regions, particularly during weekends when the machines are not in use.

The Local Government Ministry will additionally deploy equipment under the District Road Improvement Programme (DRIP) to support the exercise.

"We are going to invite all contractors in this country that are operating within the radius of Greater Accra, Eastern and then Central whose equipment are close by and then also you know that the Ministry of Local Government we also have our own equipment, the DRIP equipment. The Mayor is here, the DRIP equipment, we have at least not less than a hundred trucks, we have not less than sixteen excavators and dozers and then loaders etc. So we will mobilize ours first, then we will invite all the contractors to assist us with equipment during the weekends when they are not at site," Mr Ayariga explained.

"They will assist us or those who have equipment that are not actively on site so that we will start the process of evacuating this waste that has been lying here all these decades out of this site and then redevelop it," he added.

Mr Ayariga said clearing the site would be followed by redevelopment to prevent the area from returning to its current state.

However, he stressed that the redevelopment would not involve evicting residents who depend on the area because of their proximity to their places of work.

"Now if you do that and finish and maintain this community, we will have a problem because again they will keep dumping. So we will redevelop this area. When I say redevelop, I don't mean we will sack the people. We will redevelop it by taking some space there and then developing low-cost housing facilities. But these are people who are providing services in the city and it is convenient for them to live close to where they provide the service," he stated.

Jamestown slum set for high-rise container housing plan – Ayariga

Minister for Local Government, Chieftaincy and Religious Affairs, Mahama Ayariga has proposed a high-rise container housing project for the Jamestown slum as part of plans to redevelop the area after the evacuation of the long-standing waste heap.

Mr Ayariga said government intends to work with the private sector and development partners to transform the area into livable spaces while ensuring that residents are not simply displaced.

“What I think the state should do is to redevelop it into high rise you know livable spaces. So we will mobilize support from the private sector, mobilize support from our development partners and design livable spaces,” he stated.

Mr Ayariga said the concept could allow a large population currently occupying the area to be accommodated on a much smaller portion of land through vertical construction.

He used the example of stacking about 1,000 containers to illustrate how as many as 100,000 people could potentially be accommodated within less than 10 percent of the available land.

“Look at you see if you look at this, for all you know we have within this area about a hundred thousand people. Now if you have one thousand containers, one thousand containers and you place them on one another and then you create doors and windows and then internal paneling and then you wired staircases, you can accommodate this entire population in less than ten percent of the land,” he said.

He explained that the proposed approach would seek to reorganise the community vertically rather than spread it across a large area, stressing that the intention was not to simply remove residents from the location.

“So they have no excuse, they can’t say that you have sacked them. You haven’t sacked them, you have just organized them in such a way that they go vertical instead of this horizontal layout that occupies the entire space,” Mr Ayariga explained.

The minister also said any redevelopment would be carried out with due regard for human rights principles and international protocols governing the management of slum communities.

“We don’t have human rights organizations coming. I’m a human rights person myself so I know the principles governing how to manage slum communities because there are international human rights principles and protocols that we must respect,” he stated.

He added that while residents would be maintained within the redeveloped area, some activities, including cattle rearing, may no longer be permitted.

“But we must move everybody out of the space and we must redevelop the space. We will maintain them but there are some economic activities that you may no longer be able to engage in. Look at the cattle rearing that is taking place here. You know it’s like you can’t continue such activities in the area,” he added.

Mr Ayariga further disclosed that Finance Minister Dr Cassiel Ato Forson had indicated that government has plans to create economic opportunities in the area following its redevelopment.

“And the finance minister has assured me that he has some very good plans for the area if we’re able to clear it. In fact we’ll create economic opportunities in the same space where they were and then they will also benefit by finding jobs at those locations that they used to rather use as slum settlements,” he said.

He said the next step would be to engage President John Dramani Mahama upon his return from his international assignments to finalise the programme and determine how the proposed clearance and redevelopment would proceed.

“So when the president returns from his international assignments I will sit with him, we will firm up the program and then he will come and lead us in the initiative to clear this out of the place and to redevelop the place,” he stated.

C/R: NDC has declared Gomoa its enemy; We will also declare NDC our enemy — Gomoa Chiefs

The Nananom of Gomoa in the Central Region have accused the ruling National Democratic Congress (NDC) government of declaring the people of Gomoa its enemies, warning that they will also regard the NDC as an enemy if the situation persists.

According to the Public Relations Officer (PRO) of the Gomoa Aju-mako Traditional Council, Nana Idan IX, the government has allegedly taken sides with the people of Effutu in the ongoing land dispute and is supporting efforts to take over lands belonging to Gomoa.

Speaking to the media, Nana Idan IX said their Member of Parliament, Kwame Asare Obeng, popularly known as A-Plus, had informed them that the NDC government had declared Gomoa its enemy.

He said the people of Gomoa would consequently regard the NDC as their enemy if the alleged situation continued.

Meanwhile, Nananom have issued a one-week ultimatum to the police and other security agencies to arrest a suspect they accuse of shooting and killing a man identified as Abeiku during the recent Gomoa-Effutu conflict.

The traditional authorities identified the suspect as Muzambiru, also known as Tupac, and alleged that he was involved in the killing of innocent people during the incident.

Nananom are therefore calling on the security agencies to take immediate action to arrest the suspect and ensure that he is brought before the law.

Breastfeeding Reduce Breast Cancer Risk but Does Not Eliminate the Disease – Experts

Breastfeeding can lower a woman's risk of breast cancer, but it does not make her immune to the disease, Dr Beatrice Wiafe Addai, President of Breast Care International, has said.

Speaking during a West African Journalists for Environment, Science, Health & Agriculture (WAJESHA) webinar for journalists across West Africa on the theme, Breast Cancer & Breastfeeding in West Africa: Understanding the Data, Trends, Risks & Best Practices, Dr Wiafe Addai warned that breast changes during pregnancy and breastfeeding should not be dismissed without medical assessment.

"A breastfeeding woman can still develop breast cancer," she told participants, stressing that a persistent lump or suspicious change needs prompt investigation.

The warning comes amid concern about late diagnosis in West Africa, where cost, distance, misinformation and limited access to diagnostic services continue to affect breast-cancer outcomes.

Breast cancer is the leading cancer affecting women in Ghana. IARC/WHO GLOBOCAN 2022 estimates, presented by Dr Wiafe Addai, put the number of new cases in Ghana at 5,026 in 2022, with an estimated 2,491 deaths.

Across Western Africa, the presentation estimates 41.6 new breast cancer cases and 22.3 deaths for every 100,000 women.

Lower risk, not no risk

Dr Wiafe Addai said breastfeeding remains one of the most important interventions for maternal and child health and is associated with a modest reduction in breast-cancer risk.

Evidence reviewed by the International Agency for Research on Cancer indicates that the risk may fall by about 2% for every additional five months of breastfeeding over a woman's lifetime. Another estimate cited in the presentation puts the reduction at about 4% for every 12 months of cumulative breastfeeding.

The possible protective effect is linked to changes in hormone exposure and breast tissue during pregnancy and lactation. But, she said, the effect must be explained carefully. Breastfeeding lowers risk; it does not eliminate it.

A woman who is pregnant, breastfeeding or recently gave birth can still develop breast cancer. Changes associated with pregnancy and lactation – including breast density, engorgement, nodularity, mastitis and milk-filled cysts – can also make it more difficult to identify a suspicious lump.

Dr Wiafe Addai said women should not automatically assume that a persistent breast change is caused by milk production, a blocked duct or mastitis.

Warning signs can include a breast lump, an abnormal nipple discharge, dimpling of the skin, nipple flattening or retraction, an ulcer, a change in breast size or shape, or a lump in the armpit.

Do not delay assessment

A breastfeeding woman should not be told to wait until breastfeeding ends before a suspicious symptom is investigated, Dr Wiafe Addai said.

Ultrasound is often the first imaging test for a palpable breast mass during pregnancy or lactation. Mammography can also be used where clinically indicated, she said, noting that breastfeeding alone should not prevent necessary diagnostic imaging.

If required, a biopsy can help establish a diagnosis. The belief that a biopsy spreads cancer is one of several myths that can delay care.

Dr Wiafe Addai listed other common misconceptions: that breast cancer is caused by witchcraft or evil spirits; that it is a curse or fate; that it cannot be treated; and that women die as a result of mastectomy.

She urged journalists to report on such beliefs without ridiculing patients or their families, while providing accurate information about the need for timely care.

Late presentation is one of the most serious obstacles to better breast-cancer outcomes, according to the presentation.

Women may delay seeking help because they lack information, fear stigma, cannot afford tests or treatment, live far from specialist services, or receive inadequate counselling and support.

Dr Wiafe Addai called on journalists to look beyond awareness campaigns and examine the pathway from the first symptom to treatment.

That includes asking whether women can afford diagnostic services, how far they have to travel, whether pathology is available, how long results take, and whether surgery, chemotherapy, radiother-apy and essential medicines can be accessed.

For breastfeeding mothers, it also means asking whether they are assessed promptly and whether infant-feeding counselling is available alongside cancer care.

Treatment, protecting mothers and children

If breast cancer is diagnosed, treatment and breastfeeding decisions must be made individually, Dr Wiafe Addai said.

The type and stage of cancer, surgery, chemotherapy, radiotherapy, hormonal treatment and targeted therapy can all affect what is possible. Some medicines can pass into breast milk and may require breastfeeding to be interrupted or stopped.

For survivors, breastfeeding may still be possible in some circumstances. Surgery and radiotherapy can affect milk production in the treated breast, while the other breast may produce enough milk for some women.

She said women need individual counselling from oncology and maternity teams rather than assumptions about what they can or cannot do.

Dr Wiafe Addai said protecting women's breast health should go hand in hand with supporting breastfeeding.

WHO and Unicef recommend starting breastfeeding within an hour of birth, exclusively breastfeeding for the first six months, introducing appropriate complementary foods from six months and continuing breastfeeding up to two years or beyond.

Breastfeeding supports infant nutrition and health, while also offering mothers a modest reduction in breast-cancer risk.

But, she said, women must be supported to seek breast-cancer care without fear, stigma or financial hardship.

She called for stronger breast-health services at primary level, improved diagnostic and pathology capacity, better referral systems, wider access to surgery and cancer treatment, and efforts to reduce the financial burden on patients.

Breastfeed if possible, she said. Know your breasts. Do not ignore a persistent change. Seek assessment early.

Akyem Hemang Boils ...As Residents Demand Justice Over Recent Shooting Incident

Hundreds of residents of Akyem Hemang, a farming community in the Fanteakwa South District of the Eastern Region, have called on local authorities—including the District Chief Executive (DCE), the Member of Parliament (MP), and the District Police Commander—to investigate the circumstances surrounding the fatal shooting of Mr. Douglas Acheampong by personnel of the National Anti-Illegal Mining Operations Secretariat (NAIMOS) during an operation.

Douglas Acheampong was allegedly shot dead at about 7 p.m. on Wednesday, 26 August 2026, in the Fanteakwa South District, according to accounts from community members.

According to community sources cited by local media, the incident began when military personnel attached to Operation NAIMOS stopped at Akyem Hemang and confronted a resident, Kwaku Kwebia, who was speaking on his mobile phone.

The residents demanded that local authorities ensure those responsible for the heinous act are held accountable, serving as a deterrent to others.

Speaking at a press conference, the spokesperson for the residents of Akyem Hemang, Mr. Kwadjo Asiedu, popularly known as Power, called for justice for the deceased.

"We need nothing but justice for their loss and an update on the investigation into the shooting. According to him, military personnel were passing through the community after an operation when they spotted a resident, Kwaku Kwebia, an immigration officer dressed in plain clothes, talking on the phone.

The officers, who were in four V8 Land Cruisers and a pickup truck, reportedly stopped and accused Kwebia of acting as an informant because of his phone call.

They allegedly approached him and demanded that he hand over his mobile phone. Kwebia denied the allegation, explaining that he was speaking to his brother, and resisted handing over the phone.

This situation allegedly angered the officers, who began heckling him and attempting to force him into one of the vehicles.

The incident reportedly attracted the attention of other residents, including Kwaku Kwebia's sister, who stepped in to prevent her brother from being taken away by blocking the vehicle's entrance. Douglas Acheampong also joined the effort to protect Kwebia and reportedly engaged in a heated confrontation with the officers. Consequently, the officers allegedly fired several warning shots to disperse the growing crowd.

According to reports, Acheampong was fleeing the scene with other residents after the warning shots were fired when he was allegedly shot from behind at close range.

The bullet entered through his back and exited through his stomach, killing him instantly. The officers left the scene immediately after the shooting.

Abdul Kareem, the Operations Manager of Narawa Mining Company, stated that management is calling on the appropriate authorities to conduct a thorough investigation into the circumstances surrounding Douglas Acheampong's death.

He urged them to ensure those responsible are held accountable, pleading for a proper investigation to secure justice for the late Acheampong.

The the chief of Akyem Hemang, Osaberima Mirrikissi Okasum Apori Atta expressed that the fatal shooting has deeply concerned and devastated local residents as they seek answers.

While demanding justice for the deceased, the traditional leader called for a proper investigation and pleaded with the town's youth to remain calm.
